

The Cambridge Society of Paris

Cambridge is global; its network is worldwide. In Paris, the University is represented by the Cambridge Society of Paris, where Andrew Lyndon-Skeggs (Magdalene 1967-70) has recently been elected as president.

The Cambridge Society in Paris does a wonderful job of gathering alumni and undergraduates, in facilitating access to Paris, liaising with other alumni groups, and providing bursaries to assist students with selected projects.

It also organises many events, both cultural and sheer fun. Over the next few months, a Challenge Debate in Paris against the Cambridge Union, the Fingask Follies musical revue (the first time ever outside the UK), play readings, guided walks, and a fabulous Christmas Party.

The Cambridge Christmas Party will take place in mid-December (after the end of the Cambridge term) and will be a unique but modestly priced event. Numerous outstanding musicians playing traditional jazz, tap dancers, maybe even a conjuror. With around 250 members of the Cambridge Society and their guests, in an iconic Parisian location, it's going to be a five-star occasion.

The Cambridge Society is on a roll and is growing fast, with the ambition of doubling its membership over the next year, with special emphasis on younger members.

If you would like to learn more about the Cambridge Society of Paris, or have the chance of being invited to the Christmas Party, please contact Andrew Lyndon-Skeggs via email: anls@lyndon-skeggs.com